IN LOVING MEMORY OF

Daktari Joseph Karisa Gonzi

22 OCTOBER 1952 –
1 NOVEMBER 2026

NO. 01

01

Birth and Early Life

Joseph Karisa Gonzi was born on 22 October 1952 in Bamba, Kilifi County, to the late Gonzi Masha and Nzingo Mbato. He was a brother to the late Charo Gonzi, the late Peter Gonzi, Jumwa Gonzi and the late Sidi Gonzi.

He grew up in Bamba, where he would later make significant contributions to healthcare, education and community development. He remained closely connected to the community throughout his life.

Education

Joseph began his education at Bamba Primary School before joining Makupa High School in Mombasa. When Godoma Secondary School was established closer to home, he transferred there.

After successfully completing the Kenya Junior Secondary Examination, he was invited for an interview at Coast General Hospital in Mombasa. He passed the interview and was admitted for medical training at the hospital.

Joseph later completed his Form Four education as a private candidate and passed his examinations. He then pursued further studies in psychiatry at Mathare Hospital in Nairobi, expanding his medical knowledge and developing the skills that would shape his long career in healthcare.

— CHAPTER 03

Professional Life

NO. 03

Joseph devoted much of his working life to providing healthcare, particularly in communities where access to medical services was limited.

He began his career at Mandera Hospital. He later served at Kilifi District Hospital, Kombeni Dispensary in Kaloleni and Port Reitz District Hospital before joining the Kenya Ports Authority (KPA) Bandari Staff Clinic in Mombasa.

After several years at the KPA Bandari Staff Clinic, Joseph returned to Bamba, where he established Bamba Medical Clinic in 1991. Now known as Bamba Maternity and Nursing Home, it was the first private medical facility in Bamba and the surrounding areas, marking an important step in improving access to healthcare in the community.

Joseph's efforts to improve access to healthcare extended beyond Bamba town. He also established medical facilities in underserved communities, including Mnazimumwenga, Mtsangamali, Nzovuni and Jira. These facilities brought medical services closer to people who would otherwise have had to travel considerable distances to receive care.

These initiatives reflected his belief that access to healthcare should not depend on where one lived. Having gained professional knowledge and experience elsewhere, he chose to return home and use that experience to serve his community.

Beyond his medical career, Joseph was a successful farmer and businessman, with interests in livestock, meat trading and general retail. He also founded Gonzi Transporters Limited and invested in the matatu business. These ventures reflected his entrepreneurial spirit, resourcefulness and active participation in the economic life of his community.

CHAPTER 04

Community Service and Leadership

NO. 04

Joseph was equally committed to the development and wellbeing of his community. He took an active interest in education, community development, public affairs and the institutions that served the people of Bamba.

In 1992, Joseph was appointed to the Board of Bamba Health Centre, now Bamba Sub-County Hospital. In this role, he advocated for the reopening of the facility after it had closed during the period of insecurity associated with the Shifta raids.

His commitment to improving public health was also evident in his community initiatives. He founded the Bamba Community Development Group, a community-based organisation dedicated to raising awareness about HIV/AIDS, combating stigma and discrimination, and promoting prevention. The group also supported affected individuals and families and promoted grassroots development in Bamba and the surrounding communities.

He was also a founder member and chairperson of the Kilifi Private Health Facilities Practitioners Association.

Joseph remained an active member of the Reproductive Health Network of Kenya (RHNK) until his passing. He was also appointed to the Ganze security committee, where he contributed to the safety and security of the community.

Education was another area in which Joseph made significant contributions. From the late 1990s to the early 2000s, he served on the Board of Godoma Secondary School in Bamba, including a period as its chairperson. He later served on the Board of Shaka Secondary School.

Joseph's involvement in community leadership also included serving as a Director of Giriama Ranch, a position he held until his passing.

Joseph believed that education could expand opportunities and improve people's social and economic circumstances. He put this belief into practice by supporting the education of family members and others beyond his immediate household. He regarded such support as an investment in both their future and the wider progress of society.

His concern for the wellbeing of his community also shaped his involvement in public affairs. In 2002, he contested a councillor's seat, reflecting his desire to contribute to local leadership and development. He remained politically conscious throughout his life, with a strong belief in democratic participation and transformative political ideals.

Beyond his professional and community work, Joseph was known for his kindness and generosity. He readily provided material assistance to others, often without expecting anything in return. Many benefited from his support, sometimes without the knowledge of his immediate family. He sought neither public acknowledgement nor repayment. For him, knowing that someone needed help was reason enough to act.

Joseph also valued friendship and maintained relationships across generations, professions and communities. His interest in the wellbeing of others remained an important part of his life.

Faith and Religious Life

Joseph was a Christian who worshipped at Hope Springs Church. His faith was an important part of his life and was evident in the kindness, generosity and compassion he showed towards others. He also held a deep respect for people of other faiths and valued peaceful coexistence across religious and cultural differences.

CHAPTER 06

Family Life

NO. 06

Joseph was a husband, father, grandfather and valued member of his extended family.

He was married to Datia Munga Kudza, Agnes Kahindi Choto (Assistant Chief) and Umi Kahindi Pia.

Joseph was blessed with nine children:

Florence Neema	Joyce Rehema	Janet Pendeza
Armstrong Mapenzi	Amani	Caroline Kadzo (Katuku)
Alois Kalama	Nelson Mandela	Vincent Gona

Joseph's devotion to family extended beyond his immediate household. He assumed responsibility for the family of his late cousin, Prof. Jay Kitsao Mashanga, including Gertrude Shighi Mwaeni, the late Janet Dama Dena and their children.

He also raised Samuel and Esther Sidi as his own children. They held the same place in his life and family as the children born to him.

Joseph was also blessed with grandchildren:

Mark	Joe Sadiki	Ritchie Ruwa Kadenge
Mandy	Timothy	Kyle
Awadh	Magana	Akil

He was a father-in-law to Sinina Abas, William Mburu, Mohamed Swabir and David Mutie.

His understanding of family extended beyond biological relationships. It was expressed through the responsibilities he accepted, the children he raised and the opportunities he sought to provide for those in his care. In this way, his family life reflected the same sense of responsibility and concern for others that characterised his professional and community work.

Illness and Passing

In January 2026, Joseph began experiencing lower abdominal pain and persistent fatigue, for which he sought medical attention at the Aga Khan Hospital, Mombasa.

In late February, he developed severe jaundice and underwent further medical investigations at the same hospital. He was diagnosed with cholangiocarcinoma, a cancer of the bile ducts. The cancer had spread to his liver.

Joseph began chemotherapy in March and completed his first course in July. Following further assessment and consultations about his treatment options, he continued chemotherapy with the support of his family.

In October, he developed complications that required admission to the Aga Khan Hospital. His treatment included a procedure to drain fluid that had accumulated in his abdomen. He was discharged on 16 October 2026 and returned home.

On 27 October, his condition deteriorated, and he was admitted to Kilifi County Referral Hospital, where he continued to receive care.

Joseph Karisa Gonzi passed away on the afternoon of Sunday, 1 November 2026, at the age of 74.

CHAPTER 08

A Life Remembered

NO. 08

Joseph's life was defined by the work he undertook and the people whose lives he helped improve. His contributions to healthcare, education and community development were accompanied by a generosity that often went unseen, even by those closest to him.

He returned home and established medical facilities where they were needed. He supported education because he believed in its power to change people's circumstances. He took an interest in public affairs because he believed that communities could shape their own development. He extended care and material support to people he met who needed help, often without seeking recognition.

Within his family, he will be remembered for the responsibilities he embraced, the children he raised and the opportunities he helped create. Within his community, he leaves a record of professional service, generosity and public participation.

His family may never know everyone who benefited from Joseph's kindness, nor can every act of generosity be recorded here. Yet these acts, both remembered and unrecorded, form an important part of the life he lived.

May his soul rest in eternal peace.

FROM HIS FIRSTBORN DAUGHTER

The woman of many titles

Dad, you are my hero: a soldier, emotionally, physically and mentally.

You always called me "my firstborn, the woman of many titles." I often took it as a joke, a proud father showing off his daughter.

I only understood what it truly meant the day you left, as I was holding your hand.

> For four days I held your hand, Baba.

I felt your hand grow cold and your breathing slow, and in that moment I understood: "the woman of many titles" was your love letter to me. Thank you for letting me be the one to hold your hand until the end.

Daddy, I will miss your voice, and I will forever cherish being your daughter. Being part of your bloodline is the greatest gift you ever gave me.

Rest well, Baba.

Forever your firstborn.

The name you gave me

Hawerisa, your daughter.

I honestly don't know where to begin. Hawerisa, the name you lovingly gave me, carries a lifetime of memories and love. Every time you called me "Mama Hawerisa", I felt a special connection with you. Now I keep wondering: who will call me that again? How I wish I could hear you say it just one more time.

You were more than a father to me. You were my protector, my adviser, my source of comfort and one of the people who made me feel most deeply loved. You had a beautiful way of making all nine of us feel special. Your love knew no boundaries, and your heart had room for each of us.

I will miss our conversations, your advice and even the little moments we took for granted. I will miss Christmas and New Year's celebrations with you, moments that will never feel the same without your presence.

I keep remembering our last meeting, when you reminded us to remain united, to stand together and to work as one family. Little did I know those words would become such a precious parting message.

> I promise to hold on to that lesson and do my part in keeping our family together.

You always encouraged me to be a good person, to respect others and to carry myself well wherever I go. Those lessons will remain with me for the rest of my life. I promise to keep making you proud.

The name you gave me

I wish we had more time: more conversations, more laughter and more moments of simply being your daughter. Your departure has left an emptiness that words cannot explain.

Thank you for choosing the name Hawerisa for me. Thank you for your guidance, your kindness and for loving me so generously.

I may no longer hear your voice calling "Mama Hawerisa", but I will carry that name with pride for the rest of my life. I will miss you every Christmas, every New Year and in all the family moments where your presence once made everything complete.

Rest peacefully, my dearest Dad.

Your daughter will forever cherish you. I love you beyond words.

Dad, what do I say?

A tribute to my father, Joseph Karisa Gonzi.

Dad, what do I even say?

Our bond started way back, and I honestly don't ever remember having to fight for your affection. You never made us question whether you loved us. You showed us, in so many ways, just how much we meant to you.

I remember the day I went into hiding because I was being punished for something I had done. I stayed hidden until you came along, and somehow it ended with me earning a trip to Msa, complete with treats! I also remember the queen cakes you would buy me whenever I was punished. Hahaha! Looking back, those little moments mean everything to me.

> I was your girl. Your Pendo.

Dad, I have so many memories of us. Just you and me. The trips we made for fun, the trips we made for medication, the conversations, the laughter, and the moments when you stood by me even when everyone else thought otherwise.

And those late-night calls! Oh, Dad! We could talk for hours, updating each other about life, sharing stories, advising one another and sometimes counterattacking with prayers. We were never short of things to discuss. Who will I call now? Who will give me an update, listen to mine, advise me and join me in those prayer conversations?

Dad, what do I say?

I remember your generosity. You had a heart that knew how to give. You taught me to love and to be generous, and most importantly, you always reminded me that no matter what happened out there, I always had a home to come back to.

And Dad, I have come to appreciate just how strong you were: how you managed to joke even in the middle of pain, and how you could make us laugh even when things were difficult.

Dad, umetupiga verb! I honestly don't know whether I will ever recover from this one. I don't know how to navigate life without you.

But it's okay, my friend. You have fought your fight. You have carried your pain. You have given us so much love.

> Now rest. Rest well, Dad.

Thank you for loving me so loudly. Thank you for being my safe place, my friend, my prayer partner and my father.

I will forever be your girl, your Pendo. Your princess, your Precious Pendeza.

I love you, Baba.

"Yes, my daughter!"

That's how my Dad picked up my calls.

Daddy, if there is one thing I wish I could do again, it is call you. Just one more time. Not because I have anything important to say, but simply because I miss you. I miss that familiar voice, and the comfort of knowing that somewhere in this world I had a father who was always happy to hear from me.

Wherever I was, I could almost feel your smile. That gentle, slightly slow voice of yours, as though time paused whenever you spoke. A voice that brought reassurance and pride, and made everything feel okay.

You never got tired of telling me you loved me. Sometimes you said it more than I wanted to hear. Today I would give anything to hear it once more.

Dad loved travelling and dressing up. He took us everywhere: to explore, to enjoy a nice meal, or simply to spend time together. I was a child enjoying the company of a great man. I thought every child had a father who was their shield and protector.

> Oh, Dad, how wrong I was.

Without you, we have already been questioned. Suddenly I understand what your presence meant. You were our shield, and now I feel exposed. I never understood how much protection came simply from having you around, until now.

You believed in education with an almost cult-like conviction. It was non-negotiable! You believed education could change lives because it had changed yours. And when I wasn't taking it seriously, you did everything and anything (almost illegal!) to keep me on track.

"Yes, my daughter!"

You asked me for a degree, Dad. I remember your birthday, just before my graduation, when I sent you "HAPPY BIRTHDAY, MY KING!" You ignored the birthday wishes and replied:

> "Mummy, I will become a real King when you bring me that certificate."

Well, Dad, I brought you that certificate! And from then on, I was never addressed otherwise. I had earned that title.

But beyond the degree, you taught me how to live.

You taught me utavuna ulichopanda, but also to tell useful weeds from harmful ones. You taught me discernment. You taught me to prepare for every room and every responsibility, but above all, to believe in myself and never be intimidated.

Looking back, Dad, you weren't just preparing me for a degree. You were preparing me for life.

When I saw the message in the family group about cancer in the family, I was dumbfounded. I called you, wanting to know how you were taking it. You said:

> "Mum, something must kill a man."

Indeed, cancer has taken my King. But I will never forget that day in Kilifi.

I arrived around noon, came to your bedside, held your hand and rested my cheek on it for about fifteen minutes. You were exhausted. I called you, but you didn't respond. I wanted you to open your eyes, recognise my voice and say something. Anything.

Our mums gently shook you and told you, "Your children are here. Amani and Katuku are here now. Let's go home." But you were too tired.

"Yes, my daughter!"

Daddy, I was right there, holding your hand, yet unable to reach you the way I always had. I wish you had opened your eyes just once more. I wish I could have heard you say:

> "Yes, my daughter!"

My gentle old man. Selfless, intelligent and loving. The man I could talk to for hours, sometimes for no reason at all other than that you were my Dad.

I took so many things for granted: the random visits, the travels, the conversations, the laughter, and the comfort of knowing you were always there. Now I find myself wishing for the ordinary moments I never imagined would become memories.

Asante sana, Daddy. Thank you for loving me, believing in me, pushing me and preparing me for life. I am proud to be your daughter.

I have released you. Ukanilamsire zimi wangu, Mikadzo Kalu. I know you will be fine with her.

Don't worry about Zimi, Misidi Jumwa na Mkulu wangu hawe Risa. You know my abilities. You trusted me, and you believed in me. I am under control, Dad.

I will carry on. I promise. I will carry your lessons, your values and your confidence wherever life takes me.

I wish I could call you one more time, Daddy. Just to hear that familiar voice, and those three words that will forever live in my heart:

"YES, MY DAUGHTER!"

Rest in peace, my King.

Rest well, Babaa.

FROM HIS SON GONA

My Dad, my Hero

The man who shaped my world.

Dad, the day is finally here: the day I have to find the words to pay tribute to you. But how do I say goodbye to someone who has been part of my entire life? To me, you are immortal. My mind still hasn't come to terms with the fact that you are gone. It doesn't feel real. I wake up every day hoping I will get one last chance to see you, hear your voice and say "Shikamoo" one more time.

Dad, you were our world. When you left, it felt as if the whole world stopped with you. Everything feels empty. Nothing is quite the same any more.

I keep going back to your birthday, which we celebrated just days ago. If there is one memory I could hold on to forever, it would be that day: seeing you smile and laugh. For those few hours you were happier than I had seen you in a long time, especially in these difficult days of illness. I will forever treasure that birthday.

Dad, there is something I wish you could know. The last time we talked about school, I told you we were waiting for our project results.

> Dad, I made it! I did it!

I wish I could tell you while looking into your eyes, and see that proud smile. You may not be there in person at my graduation, but I know you will be there in spirit. I will walk across that stage carrying your love, your sacrifices and everything you taught me. I hope I make you proud.

When I think about my childhood, I realise how much of my life I spent by your side. You made sure I was always with you. Wherever you went, I went too. From medical camps to seminars and work engagements, you hardly ever left me behind. I grew up in your world, watching you attend to patients, even through those midnight wake-ups. Those memories will stay with me forever.

I remember you teaching me how to iron clothes and make a bed. I will never forget the little shirt you bought me as a child, with the words "DOCTOR IN TRAINING" written on it. Dad, you were already planting a dream in my heart. I was only a little boy, but I already wanted to be like you. You were my first hero, and I grew up wanting to follow in the footsteps of the man I admired most. I wish you could see how far that little boy has come.

I know you wished you had more time to teach me about the hospital and everything you knew. But you forgot one thing, Dad: I was already there. I had been learning from you since I was barely a toddler. I watched, I followed and I listened. I may not know everything yet, but I carry so much of what you taught me.

Don't worry, Dad. I will be fine. My three mums are here, my siblings are here, and we will look after one another.

I hope the angels know what a wonderful soul they have welcomed. Please give Shangazi my greetings. I hope you have found her, that all the pain is finally gone and that heaven is everything you wished for. I hope you are both at peace. Don't worry about us, Dad. Tsangazimi will be fine, and we will look after each other here.

As I write this, my tears are slowly making me accept the reality I have struggled to face: that I will not see you again, at least not in this lifetime. It hurts more than words can explain. But give me time, Dad. I know I will be alright, eventually.

Thank you, Dad, for your sacrifices, your guidance, your love and the beautiful childhood you gave me. Thank you for being more than a father. You were my teacher, my role model, my hero and my greatest inspiration.

Until we meet again, rest well.

I love you, Dad. I always will.

A place I could call home

My father-in-law made me feel welcome in his homestead in a way I will forever cherish. He, together with his entire family, embraced me with so much love, warmth and respect that I felt I truly belonged.

He fondly called me "Mum" and treated me with the tenderness and respect one would give one's own mother. Yet our bond went beyond that of a mother and son. He also made me feel like his own daughter, giving me a sense of belonging, comfort and a place I could always call home.

He was always filled with joy whenever he saw me coming home, and that happiness is something I will never forget. He affectionately called my sons his brothers, and he loved them dearly. His love reached beyond me, to the people I hold closest to my heart.

What made our relationship even more special was the trust he placed in me. He valued my judgement, respected my expertise and had the confidence to entrust me with

A tribute to my cousin brother.

Today is a very hard day for me. I have lost not just a brother, but a friend.

When I was still a young boy, he used to carry me on his small red bicycle to his place, back when he was working at Port Reitz Hospital.

I still remember those rides. I would sit behind him, holding on tight, and he would pedal me all the way. To me, he was not just my cousin. He was my hero: the big brother who made sure I was safe, and who made sure I was happy.

That is who he was. A caring man, who would go out of his way to make someone else smile, even with something as small as a bicycle ride.

Thank you for carrying me

Then cancer came, and we watched him fight. He fought bravely. He fought with strength, even when his body was weak. We prayed, we hoped, we stayed by his side. But today, God has called him home.

It is painful. I will miss those rides. I will miss his voice. I will miss his laughter.

But I know this: he is no longer in pain. No more hospital beds, no more medicine, no more suffering. He is resting in peace.

My brother, thank you for carrying me when I was small. Thank you for loving me like your own little brother. I will never forget you.

Rest well, my brother.
